Millions Turn Away From Synthetic Hormones

When significant health safety concerns arose in 2002 for women using synthetic hormone replacement therapies (HRT), millions stopped taking it—up to 70 percent according to one survey¹. Patients and physicians alike began to search for alternatives.

Bio-Identical Hormones: The Right Choice for Your Body

Countless women (and men) have now made the switch to bio-identical hormones, long preferred for hormone therapy in Japan, France and other European countries. It is finally receiving considerable attention in the U.S. and being more widely prescribed.

Hormone Balance is not One-Size-Fits-All!

After the shocking results of the Women's Health Initiative study, a large number of physicians turned to bio-identical hormones although many of them lacked the background, training or expertise in the field. While these doctors are good at prescribing the right kind of hormone (bio-identical), they often fail to actually balance a patient's hormones—something that is vital to good health and well-being.

Other Bio-identical Methods Just Don't Cut It

Other bio-identical delivery methods—i.e. creams, pills, injections and even micronized capsules—cannot provide a steady dose of hormone in your bloodstream twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week. That means you are still subject to a roller coaster ride of hormone levels. And even though patches do provide a constant stream of hormone, they have to be changed often. And then there's that sticky adhesive issue to deal with.

The BioTE® Therapy Difference
